November 7, 2018

WHAT: Waterfront Holland will hold another public open house similar to its previous kickoff event to give the public another opportunity to provide feedback and thoughts about the future of the Holland waterfront. The open house event includes map tables to show the waterfront in its entirety and highlights of parks and industrial neighbors in the area, a timeline of the project and other educational materials. The open house will also include an interactive children's area with markers and paper to encourage children in the community to share their ideas and vision for the waterfront.

WHEN: Saturday, November 10, 2018 from 9:30 a.m. to 11:00 a.m.

WHERE: Herrick District Library
300 S River Ave, Holland, MI 49423

WHO: With the retirement of the James De Young (JDY) power plant in 2017, the city of Holland received a unique opportunity - to shape the future of Holland's downtown waterfront. With no specific plan or timeline in place for the JDY site, Waterfront Holland is a series of public events meant to engage the local community in a positive, collaborative relationship to develop a shared vision for the future waterfront. With a series of community engagement workshops, Waterfront Holland gives the people of Holland the opportunity to shape the waterfront both in the short term and for decades to come as additional opportunities arise. <https://waterfrontholland.org/>
